From the President.

As we move along into another year, we're going to be welcoming several new directors onto the state board. I'd also like to thank Dale Butler for shifting gears and accepting a seat for our executive sessions. He's replacing Phil Ferrare, who has become the newest regional director and is covering the northwest and north-central portions of our state. Congrats, Phil!

I also hope everyone experienced a memorable, safe, and successful fall and winter hunting season. I've heard many interesting stories and some tall tales, for sure! Most of all, we need to remember to introduce newcomers to our sport and be sure the young folks have opportunities to become involved with us. I've heard of servicemen trying to acquire leave time to be home and hold tight the tradition of hunting with their extended families and friends. It's at these times that I'm thankful for all these men and women are doing for all of us. Remember to tell them, "Thank you." They really appreciate that.

Looking ahead, we're working with the PGC to leg-band more gobblers this winter and to implement and update turkey hunting safety messages and promos to remind everyone that proper gun handling, knowing your surroundings and what is in and beyond the line of fire, positive identification, and seeing a beard are the necessary ingredients to ensure a safe and successful spring hunt. We're expecting that things will move along and the orange headdress won't be required of us this spring. Share with us the responsibility of mentoring,

Once again, thank you all for everything you do to keep the NWTF a frontrunner in the world of conservation organizations. I really need to make use of this opportunity to thank Rhonda Henry for all the secretarial projects and some non-secretarial things she helps out with when asked. My computer was in the dumps for a bit, and I relied on her to keep things moving forward –and they did. Quality folks are hard to come by and especially to keep around for some time. We do these things because we care and feel a responsibility to cycle through the system, but there is a constant need for new folks to express interest and keep the wagon on course. Please, feel free to chat with anyone of our state chapter directors about joining our ranks, as we are always looking to fill vacancies or for help in other areas or committees.

REGIONAL BIOLOGIST

Bob Eriksen

27 Canterbury Rd. Phillipsburg, NJ 08865 908-454-1882 boberikesen@juno.com

By Bob Eriksen, NWTF Regional Biologist

Turkey hunters often ask biologists about the frequency of occurrence of certain characteristics among wild turkeys. For instance, just last week I received an e-mail inquiring about how regularly gobblers with double snoods are seen. That would be a pretty tough one to predict, but it got me to thinking about oddities that occur a little more regularly. Probably the most frequently asked question of this nature has to do with the incidence of bearded hens. With that question in mind, I went back to banding records for eastern wild turkeys captured in New Jersey between 1977 and 2007.

Turkey

Continues

Unfortunately, not all of the data was on the computer so I had to do a bit of checking the records the old-fashioned way. Actually, going through the records of wild turkeys I had personally banded over the years was kind of fun and interesting.

So, just how many hens have beards? Some reports indicate that as many as 25 percent of hen turkeys are bearded. That figure was derived from a relatively small sample of Rio Grande hens captured in the early 1970s. Among eastern wild turkeys, the incidence of bearded hens is not nearly as high as that report indicated. In the 30year period between 1977 and 2007, 2,360 wild turkeys were live trapped and banded in New Jersey. A larger number of turkeys were examined at checking stations, but check station operators may miss the occasional bearded hen or other oddities and fail to record the information. Technicians and biologists involved in banding usually record any oddities they encounter so the trapping records provide a pretty reliable index of the incidence of oddities.

A total of 1,515 hen turkeys were banded in New Jersey in the past 30 years. Of those, 133 (8.77%) sported beards. Hen beards ranged in length from 1 to 8 1/2 inches, but averaged about 6 inches. In general, the beards were quite thin compared to those of gobblers. Juvenile hens (hens that are less than a year old) are probably less likely to have visible beards than their adult counterparts. It is also likely that a very short beard that does not show through the breast feathers might not be noticed by a biologist handling the bird while banding it. Biologists and technicians banding turkeys are likely to search for a beard on a jake, but not on a young hen. Looking only at the 619 juvenile hens banded in those 30 years, I found that only 7 (1.14%) had noticeable beards. On the other hand, of the 903 adult hens banded in the same years, 126 (13.95%) were bearded. The incidence of beards on adult eastern turkey hens might be a more reliable index of the true occurrence of beards on eastern hens, that is between 13 and 14 percent.

Even more uncommon than beards on wild turkey hens is the occurrence of spurs. Out of the same 1,515 hens banded in New Jersey only 5 (0.33%) had spurs. Four adult hens out of 903 (0.44%) and 1 juvenile hen out of 612 (0.16%) had spurs. In all cases, the spurs were less than a half inch long, and most of the hens with spurs had a spur on only one leg. Some of the spurs on adult hens were pretty sharp, and the juvenile had blunt spurs.

What about anomalies among gobblers? How many gobblers have multiple beards or multiple spurs? How many have no beard or no spurs? There were 845 gobblers banded in the 30 years between 1977 and 2007. Only 31 of the banded gobblers had more than one beard (3.66%). In other words, less than 4 percent of eastern wild turkey gobblers have two or more beards. Of the birds we examined while banding, only one had three or more beards. Over the years, I have measured multiple beards on gobblers killed by hunters. Most had two beards, and three beards were next most common. I have seen harvested gobblers with as many as eight individual beards, but they are quite rare. Two of the banded gobblers (0.23%) had no visible beard and on closer examination had no indication that they had ever had a beard. Only one of the captured birds had multiple spurs (0.11%), and one had no spurs at all.

About fifteen years ago on a beautiful spring morning, I called up an old gobbler for one of my sons. It was Jesse's first gobbler, and he made a good shot at about 29 steps. That bird weighed 21 _ pounds and had three beards and double spurs on both legs! Jesse was pleased with his gobbler, but he really had no idea what an uncommon trophy that bird was. Would you believe that the second gobbler Jesse killed also had double spurs? Since then he has taken one more tom with a double beard, but has no more multiple-spurred gobblers to his credit.

Getting back to the question about double snoods, that is a tough one to answer. None of the toms in the sample of banded birds from New Jersey had two snoods. Though I have examined hundreds of eastern gobblers harvested by hunters at check stations and other locations, I have never seen a gobbler with two snoods. I recall seeing a photograph of one such bird. My guess is that the occurrence of double snoods is so uncommon that most biologists will never observe the oddity. But if you live long enough and look at enough wild turkeys, you are bound to see a few oddities!

On Saturday, October 20, 2007, the Bass Pro Shops Outdoor World in Harrisburg held their first Wheelin' Sportsmen NWTF deer hunt with the Michaux Yellow Breeches Chapter, along with many local volunteers and other conservation and outdoor organizations. We had help from, and many local committee members from the NWTF, SCI, and NRA served as guides and helped to gain hunting access for the participants. Chris O'Hara from Bass Pro Shops was instrumental in coordinating the event.

Michaux Yellow Breeches Chapter President, Randy Rakers, was able to get five hunters from the Walter Reed Army Hospital's Wounded Warriors program to participate in the hunt. Overall, 22 hunters were able to participate in the various activities throughout the weekend. Friday night, the hunters were all invited to the Bass Pro Shops Outdoor World store for a fun-filled evening to meet their guides and enjoy a meal provided by SCI, along with raising some money for the NWTF with a silent auction and raffles. With heavy rain Friday night, everyone prepared for the Saturday's hunt to be wet one, but when the sun rose Saturday morning, all were greeted with a sunny morning and blue sky. Even though the weather was hot and the deer were not moving, the hunters did manage to harvest four deer that day.

We would also like to thank the following people for helping make this day a great success for the hunters: Harold Stoneberger, landowner and SCI Blue Mountain Chapter, Adam Flod, SCI Blue Mountain Chapter and Eastman Outdoors, Jim O'Brien, Bass Pro Fishing Manager, Kory Enck NRA, Carl Roe, PGC Executive Director and Troy Bauer for taking care of the hunters butchering needs and all the landowners in WMUs 5B and 5C who donated their land to hunt on.

NWTF's James Earl Kennamer

Honored as Top Conservationist by Outdoor Life magazine

EDGEFIELD, S.C. – The National Wild Turkey Federation's Dr. James Earl Kennamer was recently honored in Outdoor Life magazine's top-25 list of people who have positively affected our hunting and fishing traditions.

Kennamer, NWTF's senior vice president of conservation programs, has played a key role in forging the partnerships between hunters and wildlife agencies, corporations, and conservation groups that helped restore turkey populations across North America. His dedicated work with wildlife agencies has made a difference, moving turkey populations from 1.3 million in 1973 to more than 7 million today.

"I really appreciate the NWTF giving me the opportunity so many years ago to work on behalf of wildlife, particularly the wild turkey," Kennamer said. "Outdoor Life has been entertaining and informing hunters, America's true conservationists, for decades. They've been an important part of sustaining our hunting traditions, and it's a great honor to be recognized by such a distinguished publication."

One of Kennamer's early successes was working with the NWTF Technical Committee, bringing together state, federal, and provincial agency biologists to coordinate habitat work, wild turkey restoration programs, and funding through NWTF's Making Tracks program. Through this program, NWTF works with wildlife agencies to coordinate the trap and transfer of wild turkeys. In areas where they are abundant, wild turkeys are usually trapped via nets propelled or dropped over a feeding flock. Trapped birds are individually placed in specialized transport boxes, and then released in areas of suitable habitat with few or no wild turkeys.

Since the 1950s, state and provincial wildlife agencies have moved more than 192,000 wild turkeys into suitable habitat across North America. The NWTF has accelerated those efforts through the purchase of trapping equipment, transfer boxes, funding, and the help of its volunteers and partners.

"James Earl has helped steer turkey research and restoration across this country," said Curtis Taylor, chief of Wildlife Resources for West Virginia's DNR in the Outdoor Life Top 25 article. "He's an icon of wildlife conservation."

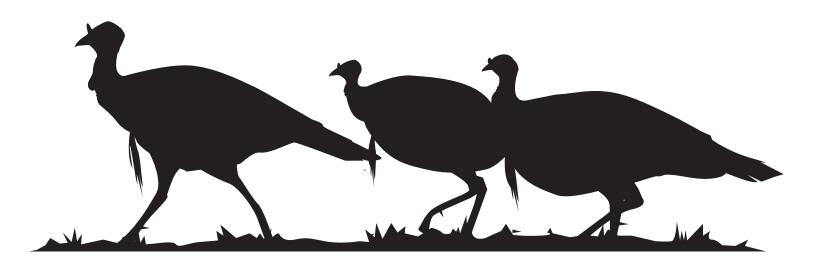

Dr. Kennamer came to the NWTF from a tenured professorship at Auburn University in 1980. His leadership in wild turkey research and management has garnered respect throughout the conservation community and helped the NWTF become the driving force in conservation it is today.

"James Earl joined the NWTF when we were still defining ourselves," said Rob Keck, NWTF CEO. "He took a chance because he believed so strongly in conservation and the wild turkey."

Outdoor Life magazine will be spotlighting its honorees at the 2008 SHOT Show. They'll be singling out one person from the list to receive the Readers' Choice Award. You can help select this person. Just log onto outdoorlife.com and cast your vote to select NWTF's Dr. James Earl Kennamer as the most deserving candidate.

Game Commission, Wild Turkey Task Force continues to study wild turkey population in Michaux State Forest

Since the 1980s, turkey hunters in Adams and Franklin counties noted a disturbing trend. While turkey populations in other parts of Pennsylvania were enjoying a historic high density, the turkeys in the Michaux State Forest were becoming scarce. From that concern, a group of concerned persons from the Game Commission, National Wild Turkey Federation, three local chapters of the NWTF, and Michaux State Forest Bureau of Forestry formed a "Wild Turkey Task Force," to research the problem.

Long considered a wildlife oasis, in recent years, the Michaux has been increasingly surrounded by urban sprawl. While urbanization has not treated turkeys well in the grand scheme of things, additional research from Wildlife Management Unit 5A, in which the state forest is located, revealed that perhaps a combination of factors are placing undue stress on turkeys.

From this research, the task force has agreed upon certain recommendations that have been forwarded to the Game Commission's Bureau of Wildlife Management and the Board of Game Commissioners to consider as part of establishing seasons and bag limits for wild turkey, as well as making other wildlife management decisions. Among those recommendations, the task force has recommended that:

1. The Board of Game Commissioners keep the fall turkey-hunting season in WMU 5A closed until data from turkey population indices show a steady population improvement for three consecutive years. If the population remains at least stable through next summer, the task force potentially could recommend to the Board that it open the fall season as early the fall of 2009.

To err on the side of caution, Mary Jo Casalena, Game Commission wild turkey biologist, noted that this recommendation could perhaps be a three-day, mid-week hunt. "Fall turkey hunting is the second most popular fall season, next to deer hunting," Casalena said. "When we open the fall season here we don't want to place too much pressure on this turkey population and find ourselves right back where we started with a low turkey density." The fall season in WMU 5A was closed in 2003, when research results showed that the fall turkey harvest was one factor suppressing the wild turkey population.

2. The Game Commission should not increase turkey numbers in WMU 5A by

"I suppose it may be difficult for non-hunters to understand the admiration and respect that we have for this intelligent, wary game bird," Heckman said. "To that end, the Pennsylvania NWTF and our local chapters are ready and willing allies for a common cause — assuring healthy populations of free-ranging wild turkeys."

the trapping and transfer of birds from other areas. While this seems an easy, quick fix, Casalena pointed out that research indicates that doing so will likely not increase the population in the long term. "Accurately managing and monitoring the natural population already in place is the recommended course of action, and the population is now increasing," Casalena said.

3. The Wild Turkey Task Force will seek to work with local farmers, orchards, and landowners to modify the method of controlling rodent populations in the area. "Free-ranging turkeys are susceptible to picking up rodenticides while foraging," Casalena said. "NWTF is contacting orchard owners around the Michaux to offer assistance with building and distributing bait stations for ridding orchards of unwanted rodents rather than broadcasting rodenticides. These bait stations will help prevent accidental rodenticide poisoning of turkeys." She stressed, however, that while turkey mortality from rodenticide poisoning is small, it is another form of mortality that is preventable. The NWTF hopes to supply the bait stations to orchard owners next fall.

Fruit growers interested in participating may contact NWTF Regional Biologist, Bob Eriksen, via e-mail (boberiksen@juno.com), for more details.

4. The Wild Turkey Task Force members will monitor the use of wildlife openings by hen turkeys and their broods within the state forest to see if more time and money should be put into improving the habitat of these openings.

- 5. Road closures in the state forest during spring gobbler season and the turkey-nesting season continue so as to minimize disturbance of nesting hens.
- 6. Timber stand thinning be conducted in certain sections of the state forest. Acom production is important to a healthy turkey habitat. The Michaux forestry staff will conduct timber stand thinning in certain sections of the state forest. This will improve survival and growth of oaks and remove less desirable competitive tree species. This effort has been ongoing with thinning on almost 300 acres so far, according to Bureau of Forestry Forester, David Yeager.
- 7. Excessive mountain laurel, which is only of marginal use as a habitat covering for turkeys and other species, be removed to encourage growth of other shrubs and plants more beneficial to turkeys. A process called "scarification" uses a bulldozer with attached specialized equipment to disturb the forest soils. Then, special seeds and acorns are loosely tilled into the exposed soil and allowed to germinate. Almost 300 acres in the state forest were treated last year.
- 8. Long-term monitoring of the turkey population in the Michaux State Forest will continue in order to evaluate the impacts of management strategies.

Don Heckman, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Chapter of the NWTF said the organization has always been active in supporting measures to increase turkey habitat. "I suppose it may be difficult for nonhunters to understand the admiration and respect that we have for this intelligent, wary game bird," Heckman said. "To that end, the Pennsylvania NWTF and our local chapters are ready and willing allies for a common cause – assuring healthy populations of free-ranging wild turkeys."

The Turkey Hunters Care program is a community outreach initiative of the NWTF in which local chapters team up to support food banks, missions, homeless shelters, and civic organizations through turkey donations and volunteer time.

On October 19, The North Boros Double Beards, located in the North Hills of Pittsburgh, donated 36 turkeys to Light of Life Rescue Mission located on Pittsburgh's North Side. The donation was part of the Turkey Hunters Care program and was coordinated with Tom Friday's Market, also in the North Hills. The donation will help Light of Life provide their annual Thanksgiving Banquet for the poor, hungry, and homeless of Greater Pittsburgh.

"As a conservation group and organization of turkey hunters, we want the community to know that we are interested in more than just hunting," said Bob Schmid, president of the Double Beards. "That's why we partnered with groups like the Woods Run Youth Fishing tournament in July and now with Light of Life. It's a natural continuation of our involvement with the communities in the northern sections of Allegheny County."

"We expect to serve over 1,000 turkey dinners on Thanksgiving," said Tom Lazar, Light of Life's Director of Development, "and this donation certainly helps us do that. Most importantly, every meal represents an opportunity for people in need to receive life-changing care provided by our programs."

On Nov. 13, members of the Allegheny Mountain Chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation (AM NWTF) donated 50 Thanksgiving turkeys to the St. Vincent DePaul - Assumption Chapel (SVD-AC) food pantry in Altoona. The chapter also donated an additional 30 turkeys to the St. Vincent DePaul in Lilly. According to SVD-AC director Don Belsey, the food pantry assists about 725 needy families in northern Blair County each month.

Zimmerman Family Visits State Game Lands 211

By Bob Eriksen, NWTF Regional Biologist

Just as the leaves were beginning to change this fall, the Zimmerman family gathered at the home of Jerry's parents for a trip to visit the land dedicated to the memory of their son, husband, father, brother, and cousin. Pennsylvania Game Commission Land Management Officer Scott Bills and Pennsylvania Chapter Board Member Don Heckman helped to arrange the family's visit to the site of the sign placed in honor of Jerry and to a food plot dedicated to his memory. Jerry would have been pleased with the fine weather, the changing leaves, and the quality of the food plot on the mountain near his parents' home.

On that bright Sunday afternoon, more than twenty people traveled to the game lands and paused to remember our friend, dedicated conservationist Jerry Zimmerman. Few people dedicate their lives and energies to the wildlife resource in the way Jerry did. From the day he joined the staff of the National Wild Turkey Federation and even before, Jerry had an intense interest in leaving wildlife habitat in better condition than he found it. Jerry worked tirelessly to raise funds for use in habitat enhancement projects, and it is fitting that a parcel of land was purchased and added to the Game Lands system in his memory. Donations and gifts from Jerry's many friends made the purchase of the land possible and provided the funding for the food plot located within sight of the sign.

Many forms of wildlife will benefit from the addition of this property to SGL 211, and many future hunters who never met Jerry will enjoy following their hearts to the woods. Wild turkeys and deer will feed in the food plot near the sign. Thank you, Jerry, for all you did to make this world a better place for wildlife and hunters.

Profiles in Habitat The Carbohydrate Factor

A good mast crop usually

follows if the blossoms escape any late frost. After the tree purges its fruit,

it has most likely been

depleted of carbohydrates

and energy.

By Joe Krug

In the lunchroom at work, several hunters were discussing the heavy acorn crop in the area that they hunt. One hunter concluded that this was an indication that we were in for a very tough winter. Finding it difficult to remain on the sidelines of the conversation, I questioned my colleague.

"I am hunting only about 15 miles from you, and we don't have any acorns. Does that mean your winter is going to be harsh, and our winter is going to be very mild?" I asked.

My friend glared at me and failed to come up with a response. I expect that in the back of his mind, he was saying not so nice things about me.

And then there is the fellow who tells me about the woolly worm that he saw that was all black, its presence confirming that we are in for a really bad winter. I usually respond by telling him about the woolly worm I just saw that was almost all brown in color. I follow by asking my friend if that means that on his side of the highway, they are going to have a harsh winter, while on my side of the road, the conditions will be mild? Another nasty glare.

Rather than calling attention to my questionable people skills, perhaps a short, educational course on the subject would be appropriate. Current mast crops are no indication of what future weather conditions will be. They can, however, be a direct result of past weather conditions. In order for a tree to produce fruit (or seed), it must store an ample amount of carbohydrates, starches, and sugars. It takes three conditions for this process to take place: sufficient amounts of water, sunlight, and nutrients.

Photosynthesis takes plane in a tree's leaves, where sunlight, water, and nutrients are converted into carbohydrates. The starches are then stored in the trees, twigs, roots, and branches. After the tree stores enough carbs, it knows it is in condition to produce a crop of fruit and sets an abundance of blossoms. A good mast crop usually follows if the blossoms escape any late frost. After the tree purges its fruit, it has most likely been depleted of carbohydrates and energy. This same tree will go back to storing energy in the form of sugar and starches and is not likely to produce another crop of fruit for a couple more years.

In orchards, fruit farmers rarely experience a year without fruit on their trees. That is because they spend a lot of time and energy fertilizing, liming, pruning, and irrigating their orchard. A wild apple tree of questionable genetics, growing on the next ridge in an infertile soil, may produce a crop of apples maybe only once every eight or ten years.

How can this knowledge be of any avail to a hunter, aside from avoiding nasty glares? It would be wise to take a few lessons from the guy who operates the orchard. Pruning that old apple tree where you bushwhacked several bucks over the years would be helpful to its productiveness. Also take time to remove any competing vegetation, which robs the tree of water and nutrients.

Speaking of nutrients, don't forget about fertilizer. For a good rule of thumb, add about one pound of fertilizer for each inch of trunk diameter – 10-10-10 or 15-15-15 fertilizer should be adequate. Do not – and I repeat – do not exceed this amount! Excessive nutrient levels can severely damage the tree. About every third year, I recommend skipping the fertilizer to avoid nutrient build up. Better to err on the side of safety. If soil is acidic, a coat of lime once every six or seven years would be beneficial as well. The same type of care to that big oak tree will greatly enhance its productivity as well. Skip the lime for this big boy, however, because oaks like acidic soils.

Good luck with your newfound knowledge, and may all of your efforts bear fruit!

Habitat Corner – Frost Seeding

By Bob Schmid

If your clover plots are anything like mine, they are probably coming through the winter showing some bare spots from overuse by the deer and turkeys. A good technique for recharging your existing clover plots prior to the spring is frost seeding. As the name implies, this technique of seeding occurs before the last frost of the season. The best time to do this is when the daytime temperatures are above freezing but the nighttime temperatures dip below freezing, creating a freeze-thaw action.

Best results are achieved once the snow has melted. Choose your favorite type of clover seed and apply at a reduced rate than the directions state. A rate of about 50 percent of the recommended seeding rate is probably plenty, or between 2 and 6 pound per acre, depending upon the type of clover you plant. Use a broadcast spreader to apply the seed or even a hand spreader, depending on the size of the plot and the equipment you have available. The objective is to achieve good seed to soil contact. This occurs when the freeze-thaw cycle creates tiny fissures in the soil, which then sets the seed into the soil when the ground thaws. Frost seeding is one technique in maintaining your existing clover plots that can help minimize weeds from filling in bare spots and prevent you from having to completely replant the plot.

For more information on creating food plots and other habitat management techniques log on to the "Habitat Corner" page on the PA NWTF Web site: www.panwtf.org/habitatcorner.php.

Attention Pennsylvania Turkey Hunters

YOU Can Help Eliminate Orange During Spring Turkey Season

At their October Meeting, the Pennsylvania Board of Game Commissioners indicated they prepared to eliminate the fluorescent-orange requirement for the spring turkey season. It's not a done deal, though. There are still members of the media, legislators and others who do not understand the facts. And they could influence the final outcome of this vote. Let's work together to make sure this unnecessary and ineffective regulation is rescinded.

Now is the time! Currently, there is a public comment period regarding eliminating the mandatory use of fluorescent orange. A final vote will occur at the January Board of Game Commissioners' meeting. You can help by ensuring the commissioners understand why wearing orange does NOT make spring turkey season safer. Contact each commissioner in the next few weeks and tell them the facts about how orange does not improve spring turkey hunting safety. See their contact information below.

Make your voice heard TODAY.

PGC Commissioners Thomas Boop, President, Roxane Palone, Vice-President, Gregory Isabella, Secretary, Russel Schleiden, Commissioner, H. Daniel Hill III, Commissioner, David Schreffler, Commissioner, Jay Delaney, Commissioner,

E-mail the commissioners at PGCOMMENTS@state.pa.us, or write the commissioners

Pennsylvania Game Commission 2001 Elmerton Ave. Harrisburg, PA 17110-9797 717-787-4250

Help the Commissioners understand these facts:

FACT: Pennsylvania is the only state that requires orange during spring turkey season. Yet, spring incident rates in Pennsylvania have changed very little since this regulation was introduced in 1992. Average incident rate per year before mandatory orange (1985-1992): 8.75 per year; 4.3 per 100,000. Average incident rate per year after mandatory orange (1993-2005): 10.38 per year; 4.5 per 100,000.

FACT: Other states with large numbers of turkey hunters show the same or even lower average number of incidents and incident rates as Pennsylvania. Average incident rates from 1993 to present:

New York – 180,000 hunters – 7.45 incidents per year – 3.5 per 100,000;

Missouri – 125,000 hunters – 5.8 incidents per year – 4.67 per 100,000;

Wisconsin – 168,000 hunters – 2.7 incidents per year – 2.75 per 100,000;

Michigan – 98,000 hunters – 1.00 incidents per year – 1.00 per 100,000; and

West Virginia – 120,000 hunters – 1.75 incidents per year – 1.2 per 100,000

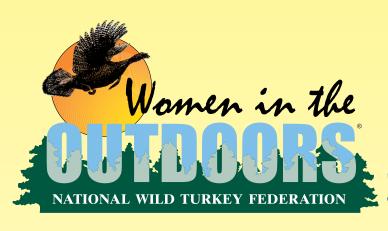

FACT: Scientific field research shows use of fluorescent orange clothing reduces a hunter's chances of harvesting a turkey. Hunters in camo are three times more successful according to research conducted in three states and published in the Wildlife Society Bulletin.

FACT: Orange is closely related to red in the color spectrum and can be mistaken for the red of a gobbler's head. Because of this, the use of orange could potentially draw fire.

More than 10 years of testing has proven the regulation requiring spring turkey hunters to wear an orange hat while moving has done nothing to improve safety. Thus, the Pennsylvania Chapter of the NWTF recommends the PGC rescind the regulation. Instead, the NWTF's Pennsylvania Chapter promotes education and awareness as the best ways to reduce spring turkey hunting incident rates. To show they are serious about that, the chapter will continue to support the PGC by providing turkey hunting safety information, preparing safety articles for a variety of publications, making turkey hunter safety DVD/CD sets available to hunter education instructors, posting billboards reminding hunters to properly identify their targets, and participating in hunter education classes as volunteer instructors.
